

Making The Decision To Go To An Alcohol Rehab In Indiana After Getting A DUI

For years you’ve kept your alcoholism a secret, maintaining a level of professional and social success. Now, however, things are different. The secret you’ve been struggling with for so long has finally been exposed.

You didn’t think you had that much to drink. You thought you were alright and could get home safely. But your blood alcohol content is over 0.08 and you’ve been charged with a DUI under Indiana’s strict drink and driving laws. It’s time to face the consequences of your actions.

Indiana’s DUI Laws

In Indiana, it is illegal to drive any vehicle while using drugs or alcohol. This state has strict laws and stiff penalties if found driving under the influence (DUI). The penalties for operating a vehicle while intoxicated in Indiana vary depending on the exact circumstances of each case. Factors such as the driver’s blood alcohol concentration (BAC) level, the age of any passengers present at the time as well as the number and type of previous convictions (if any) will be taken into account.

In Indiana, a BAC of 0.08% attracts a DUI charge and if under the legal drinking age (21 years), the BAC drops to 0.02%. Being caught with a BAC above these limits will attract a Class C misdemeanor (Class C infraction if underage) punishable by up to a $500 fine. A BAC in excess of 0.15 is very serious and you’ll be charged with a class A misdemeanor, slapped with a $5000 fine and might even go to jail for one year.

Getting the Necessary Help for Your Alcoholism

If you have gotten a DUI, you might be struggling under a burden of guilt and shame. But take heart. Help is available and you are not alone. Others have gone through similar circumstances and have managed to turn their lives around.

Consider your situation and decide whether it’s time to check into an alcohol treatment center in Indiana. Here you can receive the help you need to beat your alcohol addiction.

Some of the advantages of an alcohol treatment facility include:

- Professional help from qualified addiction treatment specialists including therapists, counselors, and psychologists familiar with alcoholism.
- Receiving an individualized treatment plan that is tailored to your unique physical, mental and psychological needs.
- A non-judgmental, conducive environment where you are immersed in your treatment can concentrate on your recovery, free from any negative influences.
- Meeting and interacting with others who are going through the same addiction. This creates a strong sense of community as you socialize and gain support from people who understand you.
